SUMMARY

This newspaper editorial report of seven Pakistani English newspapers report for the month of February 2026 demonstrates various topics at national and international level. A total of 881 editorial articles were indexed in these seven English newspapers. These articles were further analyzed identifying their subjects which shows that 29 topics at national and 25 topics at international level were covered in these articles. The editorial coverage in February 2026 reflects a strongly economical, policy-driven and geopolitically oriented agenda at both national and global levels.

Domestically, the focus is overwhelmingly on the economy (85) and government (69), indicating deep concern over fiscal challenges, political management, and state performance. Security-related issues, including terrorism and extremism (40) and social issues (37), also receive substantial attention, while development sectors such as education (28), health (22), and environment (21) appear moderately represented. In contrast, rights-based themes such as human rights (13) and women's rights (6) remain relatively underemphasized.

Globally, the coverage is distinctly state-centric and strategic, with dominant attention on major powers, particularly the United States (47) and India (30), alongside broader themes of world politics (28), international relations (21), and the global economy (21). Security concerns, including world security (12), terrorism (10), and nuclear issues (6), are prioritized, whereas human rights (4) and environmental issues (1) receive limited focus.

Newspapers’ and Their Number of Entries

The editorial report of seven major English language Pakistani newspapers highlights trends in editorial publishing during the month of January 2026 (Data attached as Annexure – I). A total of 891 editorial articles were indexed across seven leading English newspapers of Pakistan (Table 1). The News (170, 19.30%) leads with the highest share, indicating its prominent role in shaping editorial discourse during the month. This is followed by Pakistan Observer (152, 17.25%) and Business Recorder (148, 16.80%) reflecting a strong and consistent output. A middle tier comprises Daily Times (113, 12.83%), Dawn (108, 12.26%), and The Express Tribune (108, 12.26%), all contributing at nearly similar levels, suggesting a fairly even editorial presence among these publications. In contrast, The Nation (82, 9.31%) has the lowest share, indicating comparatively limited editorial contribution.

Newspapers Editorial Coverage at National Level (Thematic Distribution)

The indexed newspaper editorials present a broad thematic spectrum reflecting national coverage in these seven English newspapers during the month of February 2026 (Figure 1). A total of 29 topics covered in the said duration. At the top, economy (85 items) and government (69 items) dominate the editorial landscape by a substantial margin. This indicates that economic instability, fiscal policy, inflation, and governance-related concerns remained central to national discourse. The strong emphasis on government alongside the economy suggests that editorials are not only diagnosing economic problems but also critically evaluating state performance, policy responses, and administrative effectiveness.

A second tier of coverage includes terrorism and extremism (40), social issues (37), and politics (34). The continued prominence of terrorism and extremism highlights persistent security concerns and ideological challenges within the country. The third tier covering international relations (32), education (28), power and natural resources (28), and war, peace, and security (26), reflects a balanced engagement with both external and developmental issues. The notable presence of international relations points to Pakistan’s geopolitical positioning and regional dynamics. Simultaneously, attention to education and energy/resources signals recognition of long-term development priorities, particularly in addressing systemic inefficiencies and sustainability challenges.

Mid-level attention is given to science and technology (25), health (22), and environment (21). This suggests a moderate but growing editorial interest in modernization, public health systems, and environmental sustainability. However, their relatively lower frequency compared to economic and political themes indicates that these areas, while important, are still not at the forefront of editorial agendas.

Lower-tier topics such as human rights (13), defence (13), Kashmir (13), and Islam (12) reflect selective and issue-specific engagement rather than sustained discourse. Particularly noteworthy is the comparatively limited coverage of human rights and women's rights (6), which may indicate underrepresentation of rights-based narratives in editorial priorities.

At the bottom end, themes like media and journalism (7), sports (6), arts (5), agriculture (4), and accountability (3) receive minimal attention. The low frequency of accountability-related editorials is especially significant, as it may suggest either limited editorial focus on institutional transparency or its integration within broader governance discussions rather than as a standalone theme.

Overall, the pattern demonstrates that Pakistani English newspaper editorials in February 2026 were heavily economy-centric and governance-focused, with secondary attention to security and social concerns. Developmental sectors such as education, health, and environment received moderate attention, while rights-based, cultural, and accountability issues remained comparatively marginalized. This distribution reflects a pragmatic editorial orientation, prioritizing immediate national crises and state performance over broader societal and cultural discourse.

Newspaper Editorial Coverage at Global Level

The global editorial coverage for February 2026 reflects a distinctly geo-strategic and power-centric orientation, with clear emphasis on major states, international politics, and security-related concerns. At the forefront, the United States (47 items) emerges as the most prominently covered global actor. This dominant position underscores its continued influence on global politics, economy, and security, and signals that Pakistani English newspapers closely monitor U.S. policies and actions due to their direct and indirect implications for Pakistan and the broader region. Following this, India (30 items) receives substantial attention, highlighting its significance as a regional rival and key geopolitical concern. The focus on India likely revolves around bilateral tensions, policy developments, and regional security dynamics.

A second cluster includes world politics (28), international relations (21), and global economy and financial institutions (21). This indicates that editorials are actively engaging with broader systemic issues, including shifting global alliances, diplomatic trends, and economic governance structures. The equal emphasis on international relations and the global economy suggests an understanding of how political and financial systems are deeply interconnected at the global level.

Security-related themes form another major pillar of coverage. World security (12), terrorism and extremism (10), nuclear programs and treaties (6), and global conflicts (6) collectively reflect sustained concern over instability, arms control, and conflict zones. The inclusion of nuclear issues (e.g., NPT, CTBT, IAEA frameworks) highlights awareness of strategic deterrence and non-proliferation debates, particularly relevant for a nuclear-armed state like Pakistan.

Regional and ideological dimensions are also visible. Coverage of the Islamic world, OIC, and West vs. Muslim world narratives (8), along with comparative religions (11), indicates editorial engagement with identity, civilizational discourse, and ideological tensions in global politics. Additionally, China (10) appears as a key global actor, though its coverage is notably lower than that of the United States, suggesting relatively selective attention despite its growing global influence.

Mid-level attention is given to current global affairs (9) and social issues (7), reflecting some concern with broader human development themes, though these remain secondary to political and security narratives. Notably, human rights (4), science and technology (4), and health (3) receive limited coverage, indicating that global developmental and rights-based issues are not central to editorial priorities.

At the lower end, themes such as education systems (3), energy and natural resources (3), international law and judicial systems (3), and global organizations like the UN and UNESCO (2) receive minimal attention. Similarly, environmental issues (1) and historical or cultural topics (1) are largely marginalized.

Overall, the pattern demonstrates that global editorial discourse is heavily state-centric, security-driven, and geopolitically focused, with particular emphasis on major powers (especially the United States) and strategic issues such as conflict, terrorism, and nuclear policy. In contrast, softer domains such as human rights, environment, education, and global development, receive comparatively limited attention.
